Tips, advice and some fun facts about our best little friends who mean so much to us!

Hi again everyone and welcome to the September issue of this newsletter.

With the kids going back to school and the cooler weather soon to be with us (sorry for reminding you!), it's likely that some of you will be warming yourselves up with delightful evening treats of hot cocoa along with a chocolate biscuit or two. Although these may be some of our favourite treats, we must keep a tight eye on our dogs whenever chocolate is around.

Shockingly, reports made to the Veterinary Poisons Information Service of dogs being poisoned by chocolate has increased dramatically in the last year. Chocolate can cause severe health issues and even death to our dogs because it contains Theobromine, which is a toxic poison to canines. While many people know not to let their dogs eat chocolate, it is difficult. The real trouble is that dogs love the taste of chocolate and they know how to make us feel guilty, but they really shouldn't get any at all.

The absolute worst type of chocolate for a dog is baking chocolate, because it has the highest concentration of Theobromine. The least harmful is white chocolate and all other types fall somewhere in the middle regarding toxicity. There is no standard amount of chocolate that's okay for a dog to eat, as their ability to handle this toxin is dependent on their size, overall health and the type of chocolate.

If you find that your little friend has dug into your chocolate cake then please be on the lookout for symptoms of poisoning! As the toxins begin to spread through the body, you may notice that they become hyperactive or that they're panting a lot. In more severe cases, there will be vomiting or diarrhoea. Regardless of the symptoms you see, it's important that you contact your vet as soon as possible.

If your dog has already developed a taste for chocolate, you can purchase dog treats that contain carob. Carob tastes a lot like chocolate – you might enjoy it, too – but it does not contain Theobromine. Just be on the lookout for specialty dog treats and you're likely to find some.

Of course it's important not to overdo it on the treats as well – wouldn't want them getting overweight or unhealthy!

Maybe with all that talk of chocolate you should go put on the kettle, grab a couple of chocolate digestives, sit yourself down and enjoy the rest of the information I've shared with you in this newsletter.

See you soon and have a safe and enjoyable time with your best little friends!

A Wonderful World of Animals!

! A blind collie has got himself his own guide dog. Clyde, who is completely blind, relies totally on his companion, Bonnie, who is also a collie. Bonnie stays close to Clyde all the time and guides him to his food and water and when they're out for walks.

The pair were given up for adoption to Meadow Green Dog Rescue centre in Loddon, Norfolk, UK and are looking for a good home where both of them can go together.

Centre manager Cherie Cootes said, "Clyde would be lost without Bonnie and [they] have to be rehomed together. If Clyde's unsure where he is, he will suddenly go behind her and put his face on her back so she can guide him where he is going. He totally relies on her the whole time. When she walks she tends to stop and make sure he's there - she does look out for him."

! A Chinese family borrowed a pet cat from their neighbour to catch a mouse which had invaded their home - only for them to become best friends.

According to ananova.com Mr Li, of Changchun in north east China, borrowed the cat who quickly caught the rodent but let it go after smelling it

"they just started playing together" said Mr Li, "Now they are friends and the cat even cuddles up with the mouse to sleep," he said.

! Stray dogs in Moscow have learned to use the subway to travel around the city. According to rupor.org, scientist Andrew Poyarkov believes the dogs board the trains in the morning to travel into the city centre where it's easier to get food and then travel back to where they stay at night.

"They seem to have learnt how long they need to stay on the train to leave at the right station," said Dr Poyarkov. He also claims to have observed the same dogs waiting at green lights before crossing roads and believes they have picked up these commuting habits from humans.

GOING SHOPPING?????

Countless dogs die every year after their owners leave them in parked cars for long or short periods of time, thinking their dog is safe but not realising the dangers animals face in this situation. Leaving your dog in a parked car even for a short period of time can prove fatal.

The temperature inside the car might not seem excessive when you first stop but the temperature inside a stationary car can rapidly increase to double the outside temperature.

This can happen very quickly, within six to ten minutes.

The inside of a parked car will soon become far hotter than the outside temperature simply because a car traps the heat from the sun just like a greenhouse. This is why warm temperatures outside can quickly become deadly temperatures inside a stationary car. Even on comparatively cool days a car's internal temperature can rocket and keeping the windows open a crack hardly slows the rise at all.

Add to this the fact that your dog has on a fur coat that is designed to trap heat, and you can really begin to see why leaving dogs in parked cars can be so fatal. Also, they cannot sweat to cool down and have to rely on panting to regulate their body temperature.

The advice can only be this - never leave your dog in a parked car on a warm day, even for a few minutes. Leaving the window open a few inches, parking in the shade, or even leaving the dog a bowl of water is NOT adequate. A dog left in a car on a hot or even warm day can suffer heat stress and ultimately fatal heat stroke within just 10 minutes.

If you come across a dog that has been left in a car on a warm day, call the Police on 999 for assistance. They will be able to take appropriate action, if necessary breaking into the car to release the dog. If the Police are unable to attend, call the SPCA on 03000 999 999.

It is also worth noting that owners who put an animal at risk by leaving it inside a locked car could face prosecution.

ANYONE FOR SPANIELS????

David & Janice McKinlay have kindly sent us photos. Lucy is their very mischievous black Cocker Spaniel pup whose favourite hobby is chewing all their furniture. (They still wouldn't be without her). She is a regular at Pawcasso.

They have also sent us a gorgeous photo of Charlie their beloved boy who sadly passed away last year.

Charlie was a very special dog and we loved him to bits. He was the Houdini of the dog world. Charlie came in for baths every two weeks and groomed to perfection on a regular basis. We loved him so much and he was such a special character. We often used to be grooming away and have a feeling that someone was watching us. Yes, it was Charlie, looking all pleased with himself. He had been put in the drying cabinet but could actually open the door. We caught him in the act many times with his special party trick. Boy did he cheer us up. Cute eh!!

Miss you Charlie and know that you are happy at the Rainbow Bridge with Indie and all the other special wee Pawcasso pets!!

The Correct Way to Brush Your Dog!

You've no doubt heard me talk quite a bit about the importance of keeping your dog brushed regularly. It stimulates their skin, removes excess hair and helps to prevent tangles and matting. Whether your dogs have short or long hair, they really do benefit from having a full-body brushing whenever possible.

But while it's important to brush your dog regularly, it's even more important to brush your dog thoroughly using the right brush. A quick run with any old brush over your dog's back and sides will not be enough.

For longhaired dogs or for hair that easily tangles, it's ideal to brush them daily. Shorthaired dogs will also benefit from a weekly brushing.

But what type of brush should you use, and what exactly does a thorough brushing include? The type of brush you should use depends on the length and thickness of hair, as well as susceptibility to tangles.

If your dog's hair is medium to long in length or tends to mat, it's often best to use a slicker brush. These brushes usually have a square or rectangular head of thin wire bristles and they're available in all sizes. For shorthaired dogs, consider using a rubber currycomb. When used in light circles, these feel great on a dog's skin and help you remove excess, dead hair. For curly and thick-coated dogs, you can use a wire-pin brush but it's recommended that you also use a rake if your dog has a thick undercoat.

Of course, brushing should be an enjoyable experience for our dogs, which is why it's important that we're always gentle. This can be difficult when the hair mats or tangles, so think of it as a tangle in your own hair. By holding onto the tangled portion of hair with one hand placed close against the skin and brushing with the other, you can prevent the painful pull to their skin as you would on your own head.

When brushing your dog, you can begin by brushing from the back of the head to the base of the tail. Then brush the chest and sides by going with the grain from top to bottom. If your dog has a very thick undercoat, you can also brush against the grain to remove some excess hair.

Then comes the tricky part! Many dogs end up with mats on their stomachs, in their armpits and on the backs of their hind legs. For large dogs, encourage them to lay down so that you can thoroughly brush out their stomachs. For small dogs, you can hold their front paws with one hand to help them stand on their hind legs whilst you brush their bellies with your free hand. But also try to get under that tail if they'll let you!

Frequent brushing provides a nice bonding time between you and your dog, but it also saves you both from a lot of hassle that comes from mats and tangles.

If you think you need some spray-on conditioner to help with tangles, or need a little more advice on brushes or brushing technique, please just ask, I'll be happy to help.

Choosing a Bed for Your Best Friend!

Many of us don't mind at all when our dogs sleep in our own beds with us; that is, of course, until they start stealing our pillows or taking up more space than we do! But when they sleep elsewhere or if they're not allowed on the furniture, a doggie bed is the next best thing.

There is an unbelievable selection of dog beds on the market, from simple and low cost to extravagant and expensive designer beds. But choosing the right bed is more than a matter of taste; it really all depends on your dog's needs.

When shopping for a bed, it's important to consider your dog's size, how they lay when sleeping, whether they have any health issues and the average temperature of where they sleep.

For smaller dogs that like to curl up in a ball, it's usually best to get a circular or donut-shaped bed that has a nice cushion. You can get a plastic one with a liner or one that is cloth and filled with stuffing. Larger dogs or dogs that like to stretch out will enjoy a larger mat-style bed, doggie mattress or a lounge.

When it's colder, you do have the option of buying a heated bed but they're really not necessary. Dogs are thrilled to have a little blanket and this helps them choose their preferred amount of warmth. If your dog stays outdoors in a shed or kennel, it's often best to get an elevated plastic bed, as this allows for air circulation and keeps them above any wet ground.

You'll find that there are a few different bed filler options, such as foam or stuffing. When testing out beds, look for something that is dense enough to hold your dog's weight but soft enough to provide some comfort. This is especially important if your dog has hip problems or any type of health or age-related soreness. Although some of the nicer fillers raise the price of the item, they tend to last longer and endure more wear and tear.

Last but not least, it's better to opt for something with a removable and washable cover. This is great for when our dogs get dirty, shed a lot of hair or bring those dreaded fleas home! Plus, with all the gorgeous designs, it's nice to keep them looking great in our homes.

But of course what's most important is that our dogs have a comfortable place to rest their little heads for a nice long doggie snooze.

Pet Dandruff!

Just like humans, pets get dandruff too. It tends to be seen more in the shorthaired pets but all kinds get it.

Dandruff is usually just the aging dead skin cells scaling and flaking off. While it's normally harmless, in some cases it can indicate an underlying health issue in your pet, such as an infection, allergy or parasites.

So if your pet starts to show signs of dandruff, do not just put it down to its skin. Do a little investigation and see your vet to make sure there are no bigger issues causing the problem.

The Devil Dressed in Disguise!

'A limerick about a mischievous little puppy dog'

Because I'm a puppy I know I look cute
So I'm sure you're not really going to give me the boot,
I know you'll forgive me just as those times before
Because with a wag of my tail your heart melts to the floor.

You get all alarmed at the things that I do
But for me it is fun when I chew that big pot of glue,
And what's the big deal if I poop in your shoe
I thought I was being nice leaving it right there for you!

Why don't you have fun when we go to the park
You get to run through all that mud and stay out 'til it's dark,
I thought we were playing chase when you had that big fall
That's why I ran off and refused to come when you called.

When I ate all that chicken I'd forgotten the rule
With it there on the counter I had started to drool,
And I couldn't have known the cat would say no
Maybe I shouldn't have but boy did he go.

I really didn't mean to burst that little boy's ball
You looked awful scared when you saw his dad was that tall,
Maybe it didn't help when I peed on his leg,
It seemed really painful the way he then made you beg.

Ok I'll admit I know I could do better
I'll stop eating the plants and chewing your letters,
I'm sure I'll get forgiven when I flash my big puppy eyes
Even though you keep saying I'm the devil dressed in disguise.
